Until the snow put an end to the skating Danlelson people have been interested this week in watching an ice boat that has been in use on the Assawauga river, where there is really not much area for the operation of such a craft.

Incubator for 1,800 Eggs. An incubator of the mammoth type and with a capacity of 1,800 eggs, has arrived and is being set up in the poultry section of the Elm Vale farm at Elmville. This incubator is the largest ever put in use in this immediate vicinity and replaces some smaller ones.

Stars to Play at Worcester.

Fred Taft of Webster, well known coon hunter, has arranged a match game of basketball between the Danielson Star five and the Emmet Guards of Worcester. The Guards belong to the Ninth Massachusetts regiment and have one of the fastest ball teams in Worcester. The two teams will play the game, which is to be for $100, in the guards' armory at Worcester on the night of March 17. Both teams have had very successful seasons, so a royal contest is anticipated.

The parcel post business continues to show a steady gain at offices in this part of the county. Those who use the service most are becoming better acquainted with the government regulations relative to the sending of parcels, so the prospects are held to Stars to Play at Worcester.

New York Fairy Tales.

A New York evening paper every night runs a column headed "News Oddities." The following appeared under that heading Wednesday night: "Sheriff of Windham county, Conn., and 400 jail prisoners are cutting ice. He contracts to fill the houses for farmers at twenty-five cents a ton, including hauling and storing."

Well, Sheriff P. B. Sibley has not been noticed cutting any ice this week, though he can cut ice any time he wants to, even in the good old summer time. And as for the 400 jail prisoners, there will have to be a reduction in the number by 380 to get down to the real facts. It is a cinch to make news oddities if one is careless of the facts.

Just as Good. New York Fairy Tales.

Just as Good.

A resident of Danielson who had just spent some time poring over glittering announcements of what Danielson was to have as the result of its boom period about four years*sgo called attention Thursday to the fact that the one hundred foot boulevard is yet to be developed, its swan pend and suburban park are among the things that never came, though the swan song of the promoters, even its echoes, has long since been heard here. But Danielson has something real and valuable as the result of its venture and is not kicking.

Assigned to Danielson.

Assigned to Danielson. Daniel Doyle, who has been doing duty both at Danielson and Dayville freight stations of the New Haven road for a long time, has been permanently assigned to the Danielson station, where the amount of business transacted has greatly increased during the past year.

To Cut Ice Next Week.

Next week will be marked by the gathering of the ice crop that is to be sold in Danielson next summer. Preparations are well advanced for filling the two big houses of the Consumers' Ice company at East Killingly, where approximately 5,000 tons were cut last year and since sold, some of it being shipped to dealers in nearby cities. The ice this year is hard and firm and of the same excellent quality secured last winter.

Death of George M. Morse, 82, Manu facturer, Philanthropist, Founder of Douglas Camp Meetings-Dr. F. W. Darmer to Enter Norwich Sanitarium.

George Milton Morse, one of the oldest and most prominent citizens of Putnam, for years head of one of its most important manufacturing industries, died at his home here at 6 o'clock Thursday morning. Mr. Morse, who was 82 years of age, had been ill with pneumonia for several days.

Mr. Morse was born at Central Falls, R. I., Aug. 25, 1830, the son of Milton S. and Sussanna (Blake) Morse. His father was a cotton manufacturer of prominence in that section of Rhode Island and of a family that first came to this country from England on the ship increase in 1635, only 15 years after the arrival of the Pilgrims.

Mr. Morse's youth was spent in Central Falls and Providence, where he remained until he was 18 years of age, acquiring his education. In 1844 Mr. Morse's father removed his business to Putnam, where in 1848 the Morse mills were built. After his arrival here Mr. Morse was a clerk in the store controlled by the manufacturing company with which his father was identified. Later, however, he returned to Providence for a period of two years and attended high school and the University school, returning to Putnam in the spring of 1850.

In 1854 he became superintendent of the Morse mills, holding this office for George Milton Morse, one of the

In 1872 the Powhatan mills were erected. Mr. Morse supervised every detail of construction, saw to the placing of the machinery and that it was properly started fully prepared for the advantageous manufacturing of cottons and sheetings, a line in which the Morse mills have long been successful. Mr. Morse, in addition to his interests in the two mills mentioned and in the Nightingale mills here, was also an owner of mill holdings at Holden, Mass., but he disposed of these in 1832.

Mr. Morse was so devoted to his large business interests that he had little time to give to politics, but he was a republican and a strong advocate and supporter of a high tariff

In 1858 Mr. Morse united with the Baptist church of Putnam and became one of its most prominent members, being made a deacon in 1880. He was of deep religious convictions and a liberal supporter of religion. In 1875, while attending a camp meeting at Douglas. Mass., he became greatly interested in the work and took an active part. Soon after he undertook the establishment of a permanent camp at that place. He bought land and before his death the camp had become one of the most famous in the United States. Orily those who knew Mr. Morse best lines how extremely charitable he was. It was stated by a prominent citizen Thursday afternoon that scores of thousands of dollars were given to carrity in this city and elsewhere by the venerable manufacturer. He gave in dollars, hundreds of dollars and thousands of dollars as the circumstances warranted, but he always gave without ostentiation, and the vast amount of suffering that he relieved or prevented is little dreamed of by the majority of the people of this city. A instance of his giving came to light a few years also when his name appeared in the history of the founders of a charitable in situation at Beldwinville, Mass.

Only Florida's Finest Oranges and Grapefruit Can Bear This Brand

The Florida Citrus Exchange-a cooperative organization of growers-is mighty careful about the fruit that goes into boxes like the one shown here. No inferior fruit is packed in them. Only the best of all the fruit produced in Florida is good enough to pass the rigid requirements. The product accepted must be tree-ripened, large, plump, and sweet-full of rich, invigorating juice.

Full of Juice

The fruit isn't picked until it is so ripe that it cannot get any riper on the trees. It must be free from bruises Sweet and Solid that might cause decay, so pickers and packers handle it like eggs. They wear clean white gloves always—no hand ever touches the fruit.

The fruit must be plump and solid—not "pulpy" and "pithy." It must be full to bursting of sweet juice, such as can be had only when the fruit is cultivated and cared for properly and ripened on the trees. Such fruit as this is the kind that has given Florida the reputation of producing "the best in the world."

You can't realize the excel-lence of Florida Citrus Ex-change oranges and grapefruit A Trial Order—Then until you try them yourself. You Will Want a Box

They make common fruit seem flat and insipid. Phone your grocer a trial order—realize how good they are—and then you will want to buy by the box, to get the fruit more cheaply, and of a supply of the best. It keeps perfectly. But get a box branded in big letters across the side (in red) with the brand that the arrow points to. Your dealer has it—or can get it.

If he doesn't, you can find one who will supply you.

Drink the Juice of Citrus Fruits and Be Healthy, Hearty, Happy

You buy citrus fruits for the juice-the pulp is there only to contain the juice. Oranges and grapefruit packed by the Florida Citrus Exchange contain half again as much juice as others of the same sizesqueeze it out and prove it. Your test will cause you ever after to buy only Florida fruit. The juice of ripe Florida oranges is spicy, sweet, fragrant, and strength-giving. It has wonderful tonic properties, aiding appetite and digestion, and giving vim and vigor. The juice of the grapefruit is rich, vitalizing, and just tart enough to please and stimulate. The choicest of oranges and grapefruit cost less than other kinds, when you consider the quantity and quality of juice you get for your money.
